

After the completion of the design stage of any new product and are able to begin production, for many companies, future question is what to try and do next? From finding raw materials to making QC specifications, there are several reasons why you wish a manufacturing consultant.

The manufacturing sector is that the agglomeration of the industries engaged within the chemical, mechanical or physical transformation of materials, substances, or components into the client or industrial goods. It's evolved as the quickest growing sector in India. We can additionally outline manufacturing as the method of developing raw materials into finished products to meet up the consumer's expectations.

The manufacturing sector includes 30 percent of the Indian economy. It contributes 16 percent of the nation's Gross Domestic Product and employs 6 million people. This sector includes textiles, capital goods, electronics, automotive, machine tools, food, cereals, and so on.

A few years ago, in 2019 February, the Union Cabinet passed National Policy on Electronics (NPE) and envisaged creating a US$ 400 billion electronics manufacturing industry in India by 2025. The growth rate target is 32 percent globally in the duration. With the Make in India initiative, the Indian Government aims to increase the share of the manufacturing sector to the country's GDP to 25 percent by 2025.
